SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.

A Serious Storm in Texas.

CHICAGO, May 10.—Inter-Ocean special Dallas [illegible] A shocking [illegible] near McAlister [illegible] the wires are down [illegible] full details cannot be obtained. Reports at the extent of the storm are conflicting, but the most reliable are that eight persons were killed outright and forty wounded, and many of the latter will die. It is certain that this number is no way exaggerated, and the probability is that the fatality and casualties are much larger. The disaster occurred at the mines three miles from McAlister station on the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railroad. The storm came from the southwest and assumed its triangular shape and appeared to meet and center near McAlister. A great deal of damage was done near the mines. Buildings at the McAlister mines were completely demolished, and temporary buildings have been arranged for the dead and wounded. Physicians have gone from here, and all possible aid will be sent forward. The storm extended generally through Texas, Arkansas and Indian territory. Railroad travel is suspended in nearly all directions by washouts. There was a great hail fall with the storm which extended as far north as Fort Gibson.

Another Report.

DENISON, May 10.—Great destruction is reported in the vicinity of Paris, Texas. Two storms met at McAlister and wrought death and destruction such as only cyclones can. Every building was torn to pieces. A train with physicians, nurses and aid generally has been sent there. The fall of rain was terrific and was accompanied by a great quantity of hail stones, which fell as far north as Fort Gibson. A washout occurred on the M K & T, near Atoka, in this territory. A locomotive went down an embankment and the engineer was killed. Travel generally is suspended on most Texas roads caused by the fury of the storm.

Marshall and vicinity was also visited. Great trees, fine houses, farm buildings, fences, etc. were torn down like toys. The buildings on Tom Craig's plantation, 11 miles from Marshall, were demolished and the occupants seriously injured. A negro was killed on Frank Hall's plantation and there were a number of casualties but no deaths in Marshall.

Damage Repaired.

LITTLE ROCK, May 10.—Damage to railroads by the late freshets have been partially repaired and to-day passenger trains came through on the Little Rock and Fort Smith railway, and in the morning running of trains will be resumed on the Little Rock, Mississippi and Texas railroad. Work of repairing breaks on the St. Louis and Iron Mountain railroad is rapidly progressing, but no trains will probably run before Sunday. All the rivers and bayous in the state are unusually high. The Arkansas river has been rising rapidly for two days and is now rising two inches an hour.

Reunion of the Army of Tennessee.

ST. LOUIS, May 10.—The reunion of the Army of Tennessee is being held in Peoples theater and has fine weather and every prospect of success. Gen. W. T. Sherman called the assembly to order and said the day was chosen as an honor to those who captured Camp Jackson, in the suburbs of St. Louis. They had forgiven the past but not forgotten it, and would cherish the memories of the war forever.

Bishop Fallows, of Chicago, presented a magnificent floral tribute sent by Chicago to St. Louis. Ex-Governor Fletcher responded.

Gen. Sherman announced committees and the secretary read reports showing $3000 cash on hand.

Letters followed from absentees. Among the letters were one from President Arthur, from Vice-President Davis, Gen. Grant, Secretary Lincoln, Gen. Logan, West, McClellan and S. J. Tilden.

It was said that the company intend to till land, fish for seals and raise stock with the expectation of realizing large profits. The company followed up this statement by putting 10,000 shares of stock on the market. Juan N. Navarro, Mexican consul general to the United States, says there is no proof on file at the proper office in Mexico of any transfer of the property named, and he desires to give notice that the Mexican government will not allow any one to take possession of it until a legal title is acquired.

This amendment is intended for the benefit of Omaha, which city proposes, under the amendment, to vote $800,000 annually for paving purposes. There is also other business to be transacted, among which is the payment of expenses incurred in suppressing recent riots at Omaha, and to give assent to the provision of the act of congress to extend the northern boundary of the state.

The Harrisburg Convention.

HARRISBURG, May 10.—At a general caucus call of delegates the following committee was appointed on order of business to be brought before the convention: Rutan, Dunn, McGee, Husted and Steele. The order of nominations will be as follows: 1, governor; 2, supreme judge; 3, lieutenant governor; 4, secretary of internal affairs; 5, congressman at large. Upon adjournment of the caucus the delegates proceeded to the opera house, where the convention was called to order. Communications from Col. Quay [illegible] reporting the result of the peace conference were referred to the committee on resolutions. Judge Kirkpatrick then took the chair as temporary president and addressed the convention. He said he was proud of the conflicts that sprung up in the party because they bespeak health and moral independence of thought. Out of the conflict at Chicago was evolved that proud spirit Jas. A. Garfield, under whose banner the party went to one of its greatest victories, and the speaker believed out of the present conflict in this state there would step forth a man whose soldierly and manly record was a brilliant one. Various committees were then appointed.

Chalmers Bolts the Ticket.

NEW ORLEANS, May 10.—Chalmers of Mississippi, recently ousted from congress, publishes in the Times-Democrat an address to his constituents bolting the Lamar democracy of Mississippi and declaring himself an independent candidate for congress. He is particularly severe on northern democrats in congress who allowed him to be ousted from his seat without making a fight. His platform includes opposition to national banks, tariff for revenue only, elective judiciary and protection of the lowlands of the Mississippi from overflow. If he retires from the campaign he will support the opposition candidate against the democratic nominee.

Chinch bugs have done very little harm and are generally exterminated by the [illegible] rains. Wheat is well up and in head and harvest but a few weeks off with prospect of a good corn crop. Corn is up nicely. The warm weather of the past two weeks proved just the thing for vegetables.

Crops in the Northwest.

CHICAGO, May 10.—St. Paul special: The warm rains of the past two days coming just as a drouth is [illegible] have been very favorable [illegible] in the northwest and reports are almost uniformly cheering. [illegible] about Oskaloosa show that fall and spring wheat, oats and rye are in first class condition. [illegible] a greatly increased acreage [illegible] in small grains.

An Iowa Crop Estimate.

[illegible], May 10.—The [illegible] publishes crop reports from [illegible] Missouri, Nebraska and Kansas giving comparative showing [illegible] The condition of the crop lands is not flattering. [illegible] Illinois winter wheat is in good condition. [illegible] In Nebraska spring opened early and all crops are in good condition. The acreage of corn increased 20 per cent and prospects very bright in all lines. Acreage of wheat and oats is large. In Kansas prospects for all classes of crops are very promising. A yield of 30 bushels per acre of wheat is expected.

Mrs. Scoville's Whereabouts.

CHICAGO, May 10.—Mrs. Scoville arrived from New York last night and is the guest of friends on the south side. She is arranging a lecture tour throughout the west.

An Important Movement.

CHICAGO, May 10.—The Tribune commenting on the vote to be taken to-day by the board of trade on the rule permitting deliveries of winter wheat on spring wheat contracts, says: The Atchison, Kansas, board of trade, is sending a dispatch strongly urging its adoption, voices the sentiment of the entire producing country tributary to Chicago and the success of the new departure is of vital importance to every interest in Chicago and the country. To defeat it is to give a new lease to cliques and rings that are now making [illegible] dangerous as it is discreditable to the board of trade.

Voted Down.

CHICAGO, May 10.—The board of trade by a vote of 560 to 518 voted down the amendment to make winter wheat deliverable on spring contracts. The defeat is credited chiefly to McGeoch, Armour, Fairbanks and other bulls on the market.

Motion Overruled.

Washburne, was dying. Another, dated to-day, says: "The governor is very low, and unless a great change takes place very soon he cannot last long." Mr. Washburne's business partner, who left him two weeks ago, says he was then much improved and hopeful of ultimate recovery. Whether the new prostration is a partial paralysis is not learned, but it is supposed that such is the case.

An Old Association.

NEW YORK, May 10.—The chamber of commerce celebrated its 114th anniversary to-night. Speaker Keifer was introduced as a representative of President Arthur and responded to the toast "The President of the United States." Senator Frye spoke upon the decline of American shipping. Land League Resolution of Sympathy, Pouring Troops into Ireland—[illegible]

[illegible]

Assassination News.

[illegible] have arrived at Chatsworth. [illegible]

The body of Burke was [illegible] Nearly all stores were closed and mourning worn by many people.

An arrest has been made at Milford Haven of a man answering the description of one of the murderers. It is a man who came over by a steam mackerel boat. He refuses to give an account of himself.

Parnell has received telegrams from the American League and officers of many branch leagues and affiliated societies requesting him to convey to Gladstone expressions of their sympathy for him and the Irish nation [illegible] of the crime.

Police are guarding the warehouse of A. & S. Henry & Co. In consequence of receipt of information that an attempt will be made to destroy the place. Threats are supposed to have arisen from Fenian displeasure at [illegible] Mitchell Henry, who is a partner in the firm.

Additional information with regard to the assassination has come to light. Two boys [illegible] in the employ of the railway company state they passed the spot where the murders were committed [illegible] while the assassins struck the first blows and heard Lord Frederick Cavendish cry out "Ah! ah! you villain" [illegible] the assassin who stabbed him again. [illegible] was coming to his assistance, but the murderers with bloody knives made towards him [illegible] They saw a car on the road awaiting the murderers. The driver's back was turned but they saw the man stab Cavendish in the back as he lay on the ground.

DUBLIN, May 10.—The car by which the murderers fled has been traced [illegible] back toward Dublin [illegible] It is supposed the assassins took the train at Celbridge, getting back to Dublin at 10 o'clock. Officers of the guard ship are dragging the Liffey for weapons used by the assassins. Cloonan, supposed to be the man who drove the assassins, has been remanded for further inquiry. The crowd at the station hooted Moore on his arrival in Dublin. Moore was brought before the police court to-day, but as the police offered no evidence and his account of himself was considered satisfactory he was discharged. The Limerick prisoners Hailey and Watters were also discharged. Police still think they have a clue and are following it.

Land League Resolutions.

CHICAGO, May 10.—Many additional reports are received of resolutions by American land leaguers deploring the late Irish murders.

Mr. Fagan Gives His Views.

NEW YORK, May 10.—Herald's Paris special: Neither the adoption of [illegible] nor the shocking assassination of Cavendish and Burke [illegible] the programme of the land league [illegible] conversation with Mr. Fagan this afternoon [illegible]

Strong Resolutions.

[illegible]

Memphis to the Front.

MEMPHIS, May 10.—At a mass meeting of Irishmen held this evening the following telegram was sent:

Chas. Stewart Parnell, M. P., London: We have the encouragement and support of the Irish [illegible] Memphis [illegible] subscribed $500 for the arrest and conviction of the assassins.

Editorial Comment.

LONDON, May 10.—The Times [illegible] says no vindication of the government [illegible] public opinion. It repudiates any desire to embarrass the government and says it should regard [illegible] the present position of Irish affairs as a public misfortune.

The Standard gives currency to the belief that Sir T. Brassey, member of parliament for Hastings and at present lord of admiralty, will succeed Trevelyan as secretary to the admiralty.

A Possible Clue.

At Liverpool West an Irishman made a statement that last week in Dublin he refused an offer of £10,000 to assist in the murder of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Burke. This statement has been communicated to Sir Wm. V. Harcourt, home secretary. The man has been taken to Liverpool and still adheres to his statement. His knowledge of the locality of the crime and description of the murderers give his statement every appearance of truth. Police anticipate something important will come from his statement. He says he can lay his hands on the assassins.

A Parisian Comment.

PARIS, May 10.—The Temps applauds the demeanor of the English people in the Irish crisis and says there is no trace of rashness or precipitation. The murders seem to have generated in all parts a desire for appeasement and concord.

The Government to be Supported.

LONDON, May 10.—In the house of lords Marquis of Lansdowne announced that in consequence of recent ministerial statements relative to impending measures for the protection of life and property in Ireland he dropped the motion which he had announced against the Irish policy of the government. He said he wished to impress upon the government very earnestly the necessity of not yielding to popular clamor [illegible] strengthening the law.

A Heavy Reward.

The government will offer a reward of £10,000 for information given within three months which will lead to the conviction of the murderers, and a reward of £1000 for private information. The government will also grant full pardon and extend the special protection of the crown in any part of the queen's dominions to any person, other than the principals in the crime, who may give the information required.

The Final Ceremonies.

The body of Lord Cavendish is laid out for public view in the chapel at Chatsworth. [illegible] The queen sent a special messenger with a wreath for the coffin. The wreath is composed of yellow and white everlasting flowers, and a card attached to it with the words inscribed, "From Queen Victoria." [illegible] takes place at [illegible] o'clock Thursday [illegible] Business [illegible] suspended during the whole day. It is expected that a deputation of the duke of Devonshire's Irish tenantry from Cork will participate in the funeral procession. A special train from London will convey the [illegible] who will act as pall bearers.

Gladstone's Acknowledgment.

Gladstone has written to the mayor of Cork acknowledging the receipt of the resolutions passed at a meeting of citizens Sunday. In the letter he says: It is my firm belief that there will be but one common sentiment throughout all the three kingdoms [illegible] the terrible assassination, and that Ireland in particular throughout her length and breadth will demonstrate how far she is from [illegible]

THE ANTI-CHINESE BILL.

The President's Action Thereon—General Notes and Comments.

SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—President Arthur having wisely concluded that there was no necessity for delaying his approval of the [illegible] Chinese bill [illegible] of sending an explanatory message to congress to-day and restricted himself to the usual form of notification that he had approved the bill on the 6th day specified. The date of approval thus officially communicated to congress is May 6th, from which it appears President Arthur signed the bill last Saturday. The Post dated his approval yesterday. The effect being in either case the same, namely to put a stop to importation of any more Chinese laborers for ten years from and after the fourth day of next August.

The Post (democratic) this morning says: The anti-Chinese bill has received the president's signature and is now a law. The people on the Pacific slope will obtain their long desired relief from the Mongolian invasion, after ninety days, for ten years. Politically the honors are easy. A democratic majority passed a prohibitory bill through congress and a republican president preferred accepting a second opportunity he has fashioned it into the law of the land.

The National Republican to-day says: The approval of the bill to restrict Chinese immigration is a sufficient answer to those who have accused the president of a want of sympathy with the great multitude who labor with their hands. At the same time it has shown he had the courage to guard them against having their demands answered in a way that could do their cause an injury. It was better that relief on the Chinese immigration question should be so given as to have the approval of the largest possible number of the people. Better to travel a road with the main body of the country than to go a league with but a scanty half.

WASHINGTON, May 10.

A Public Park in Arizona.

Senator Harrison to-day introduced a bill to set apart a tract of land about 60 miles square in Arizona as a public park, to be reserved under control of the secretary of the interior like Yellowstone National Park. The boundaries of the proposed new reservation are the parallels 35 degrees 45 minutes and 36 degrees 45 minutes north latitude, and meridians 111 deg 45 min, 113 deg 45 min west longitude, embracing a portion of what is known as the Kabab plat and portions of the Marble and Grand canons of the Colorado river.

Approaching the End.

It is pretty evident from the course of officers in court in banc, there is little probability of Guiteau getting a new trial and his career will end seven weeks from next Friday.

Our Naval Armament.

In response to a resolution of inquiry from the house, Secretary Chandler states in an elaborate report that no one of the sixty-seven serviceable vessels in the American navy are in condition to engage in battle with an enemy. By the same general classification two of them can be put in that condition, except as to ordnance, in one month. Large of the others will require, except as to ordnance, one to two years. Manufacturing guns, ammunition and equipment required for rearming those sixty-seven vessels would require five to seven years, the first light gun and carriage being delivered in about one year, and the first gun in about three years. It would require an expenditure of $22,314,141 to put these vessels in the desired condition. The least expensive would be the Yantic, whose repairs and rearming would cost about $61,461. The most expensive would be the monitor Amphitrite, costing $1,631,560, Puritan, $1,583,000, and Terror, $1,5[illegible],500. Forty-five vessels, storeships, tugs, etc., are utterly unserviceable for war purposes. The most powerful gun actually in service is the eight-inch muzzle-loading rifle, converted. Theoretically its penetrating power is 9 inches of solid iron armor at 1000 yards distance, equal to nine inches. The conclusion shows that a projectile from this gun at a distance from the muzzle of 1000 yards will penetrate a plate of solid iron eight and one-half inches thick, the energy of the shot being just sufficient to carry it through the plate. Its theoretic range at thirty-nine degrees elevation is 10,280 yards. There are fifty-one of these guns actually available for service. The weight of these guns is 17,850 pounds, and the weight of the projectile 180 pounds and the charge is thirty-five pounds of hexagonal powder.

The River and Harbor Bill to be Passed.

CHICAGO, May 10.—Journal's Washington: It is understood an attempt will be made to pass the river and harbor bill under suspension of rules on Monday. This will probably be successful. It is understood the section relating to the Mississippi will permit the use of a portion of the $4,000,000 given the river for building levees to protect lands from overflows.

An Excellent Arrangement.

NEW YORK, May 10.—A Graphic's Washington correspondent says the state department and government of Mexico are in correspondence looking to arrangements to prevent successful Indian [illegible] on the border. The government of Mexico seems disposed to grant the privilege of crossing [illegible] Mexican territory in pursuit of hostile [illegible] The advantage of an understanding between the two nations [illegible] along the border was demonstrated in the recent outbreak. Forsyth sent word to the Mexican command that he was to take the field against the hostiles [illegible] The result was that the Mexicans were ready and when Forsyth and his force drove the Indians ahead of them, they ran right into the Mexican forces and were annihilated.

Another Relief Steamer.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—A vessel will leave San Francisco next month in charge of Lieut. Joseph S. Powell for relief of the Point Barrow expedition. Persons desiring to send supplies will forward them to Lieut. Powell at San Francisco, not later than June 10, marked: Point Barrow Expedition, care of U. S. signal office.

FISH CULTURE IN NEW YORK.

An Interesting Report by the Fish Commissioners of Their Work.

New York World.

The report of the New York fish commissioners for the two years ending December 31, 1881 and to March 1, 1882 submitted to the legislature on Thursday is of much importance to all those interested in the subject. It begins with a history of pisciculture in this country; hatching experiments were tried, with varying success, previous to 1867. In that year Mr. Seth Green surmounted the difficulty by inventing a hatching apparatus. The New York commission was established in 1868, Horatio Seymour, Robert B. Roosevelt and Seth Green were made commissioners. In 1869 practical operations were begun. The first experiments were with shad, of which 15,000,000 were hatched and successfully planted in the Hudson river. Something was also done with whitefish, and the present production of the hatcheries of the great lakes alone is 100,000,000 a year. In 1881 the veto by the governor of the appropriation left the commissioners without means. The report next gives a history of the establishment of the state hatching house at Caledonia in 1875. The water of the creek contains a supply of natural food for the trout and there is capacity for 6,000,000 of fry a year. This year it will be worked at its maximum. The present supply of fish at the hatchway is said to be as follows: Salmon trout 1000, brook trout 10,000, California mountain trout, 30,000, McCloud river trout, 4000, besides a large number of hybrids. Of these there is the original cross of the male brook trout with the female salmon trout, of which there are 80 spawners. Those cast the last autumn 72,000 eggs, which hatched as readily as the spawn of either of their progenitors. The product of the season has been put far from 1,500,000. The spawning season of brook trout at the hatchery usually begins about Oct. 20th, and continues till March 1st. The production of fry this year was about 1,000,000. The operations in shad hatching on the Hudson river usually begin about May 1st. The fish are caught in the night in nets as shad always spawn in the night time [illegible] ripe fish are taken in the daytime. The veto by the governor of the appropriation in 1881 stopped operations in the middle of the season. The commissioners hope this year to turn off 6,000,000 to 8,000,000. The annual cost of the shad hatchery is about $1000. This year a fish exhibition is to take place at Edinburgh under the patronage of the duke of Edinburgh, and next year another to be held in London under the patronage of the prince of Wales. The report is signed by R. Barnwell Roosevelt, Richard U. Sherman and Eugene G. Blackford, commissioners.

Jasper Minto, of South Salem, had the misfortune of having a fine span of horses drowned last week. It seems that Mr. Minto was taking some horses over to the island on a flatboat, when the horses, scaring at something, ran to the end of the boat and fell into the water, and being geared together became entangled in the harness and were drowned. The team was valued at $400.

Wallowa valley offers fine inducements to stock men. The range is ample, water plentiful and all that a stockman's heart could wish, but at present the herds are diminished in number owing to the drain made upon them by eastern buyers. The stock men of that section intend to turn their attention to stock raising more than heretofore and ere long the supply will be equal to the demand. Stockmen have fed but little the past winter and cattle are in good condition for going on the trail.

A Centerville, Umatilla county, correspondent says: We would say to all those who wish to plant cane seed for sorghum syrup that now is a good time. Soak the seed in sweet milk over night, plant not more than four seeds in a hill, at least four feet apart, and have the rows not nearer than three feet. Keep it well suckered, and cultivate the same as corn; cut the cane, after you have first taken off the leaves and top, never allow the cane to lay on the bare ground for more than ten hours. It must be cut after the first frost. Cane can be raised and syrup manufactured here so that it will not cost more than 40 cents per gallon.

N. P. FRONT, Idaho, May 5.

The track was laid as far as [illegible] yesterday. Cabinet landing, Montana Ty., the head of steamboat navigation on Clark's fork, is now looming up as the new town of the future. Already there are some half a dozen stores and as many restaurants and 16 saloons. A vigilance committee was organized there yesterday and five notorious characters were given 24 hours to leave, which demand was at once complied with.

The headquarters of construction are now moving to this point. The location is on the north bank of the river opposite the town, upon a picturesque wooded slope, with an abruptly rising background of the famous Cabinet rocks—one of the most elaborately beautiful specimens of nature's etching, combined with architectural grandeur of outline, to be seen upon this continent. The scenery of the lake and its surroundings is very picturesque, and considering the facilities afforded by the railway and the comfortable accommodations of the steamer Villard combined with the most delightful of climates, will, I think, attract many visitors and tourists during this and next month.

THE NATIONAL BANKS.

Important interests would be seriously affected if congress should much longer delay consideration of reorganization of the national banks. The original charters of these banks begin to expire this month, and within a few months the limitation of twenty years from date of organization will apply to a large number of them. The resolution passed by the house calling upon the comptroller of the currency for information concerning the recent liquidation and reorganization of the second national bank of Cincinnati, would seem to imply a doubt whether the present law authorizes the course adopted. If such doubt be well founded, then it is highly desirable that facilities for reorganization be provided; and even if reorganization under the existing law be possible, it is subject to some embarrassment, and perhaps to some injustice, which could be avoided by adopting some simpler process of reorganization.

In the case of the Cincinnati bank, it was voted by the stockholders to go into voluntary liquidation under the terms of the national bank act. The same stockholders then met, organized a new bank under the old name, and took out another charter for twenty years. Both these proceedings are expressly authorized by the law, and the fact that the men who were stockholders in a former bank start a new one, or that the name of a defunct corporation is adopted, does not appear to be in violation of the privileges extended under the existing law. At the same time, the process of liquidation is tedious and involved, and it is not unlikely that the affairs of the new and the old corporations, nominally separate but really identical, would become confused in the continuous process of business. It is possible, too, that this sort of reorganization would afford an opportunity for discriminating against the minority shareholders. Take a successful bank whose shares are worth 200 per cent. Only 100 per cent of the current value of the shares is represented by the capital stock; the other 100 per cent is due to the good will, popular confidence, and large business which has been built up during twenty years. Two-thirds of the stockholders can vote to go into voluntary liquidation, from which will result a redistribution of the capital and undivided surplus among all the shareholders. But the owners of the two-thirds of all the shares may then proceed to organize a new bank under the old name, and thus secure to themselves all the benefit of the good will and old business of the former institution, while the remaining shareholders, omitted from the new concern, will only get back their money and its accrued earnings. It does not appear that any protest which the minority shareholders might make against such an arrangement would avail them. If so, then it requires an agreement of all the shareholders to reorganization, which may often be difficult to obtain, and the circumstances of which would enable one or two shareholders for spiteful reasons to prevent reorganization. From every point of view, therefore, reorganization under the present law, though it be fully authorized, is likely to be attended with many difficulties.

The Crapo bill, now before congress, provides for the extension of the corporate existence of the national banks as their charters expire without going through the process of liquidation. The adoption of such a bill would, in the first place, remove all doubt about the right of reorganization. In the next place, the bill provides protection for all the shareholders and the public interests. Its provisions are as follows: 1. Any banking association may, at any time within two years before the expiration of its charter, extend its corporate existence twenty years, with the approval of the comptroller of the currency. 2. This extension is made condition upon the consent of shareholders owning not less than two-thirds of the capital stock. 3. The comptroller of the treasury is authorized to make a special examination of the affairs of the bank which seeks to extend its charter, and may withhold his approval of the application when it appears that the condition of said association is not satisfactory. 4. The extension of a charter imposes upon the association all the duties, liabilities, and restrictions, and grants all the rights and immunities it enjoyed under its original charter. 5. It is provided that any stockholder who does not assent to the extension shall be paid the value of his stock as appraised by arbitration, and shall have an appeal to the comptroller of the currency in case the result of such arbitration is unsatisfactory to him. 6. The circulating notes of such association must be redeemed at the treasury of the United States, as provided by the present law, and any gain arising from the failure of holders to present such notes, and from loss and destruction, inures to the benefit of the [illegible] are to be replaced by new notes of different designs, so that there can be no confusion as to the missing notes. 7. The banks whose charters expire, and who do not desire to have their charters extended, are required to wind up their affairs under the regulations of the present law. It is important to note that the national banking act contains no provision covering the cases of corporations which expire by limitation.

It cannot be disputed that it would be detrimental to the best interests of the country to abandon the national bank system. There is a difference of opinion as to the wisdom of reposing in these institutions the power of issuing circulating notes, but this condition cuts but a small figure in the question of the renewal of their charters. It may be assumed that the banks will in nearly all instances reduce their circulation to the minimum allowed by the law. It does not pay to issue $90 of circulating notes on the basis of $120 of security, which is about the ratio at the present value of bonds, and sustain in addition thereto the taxes on capital and circulation. The main consideration is the fact that fully three-quarters of all the business of the country is transacted through the national banks, and that the uniform system, governed by the same laws and regulations everywhere, cannot be abandoned for a system of state and private banks to be regulated by as many different laws as there are states without a great shock to business interests. When this is conceded, it is the obvious duty of congress to provide a simple but guarded process for the extension of the bank charters.

The Utica Herald would be the last paper to approve of an appointment made for Mr. Conkling, and for that reason its remarks are of interest when it says:

> The relationship [with Mr. Conkling] certainly offers no reason why he should not be appointed, in the present political situation; and if it can be justified on other grounds that is all that is necessary. It is a fact that the petition for Mr. Coxe's appointment which went from the fifth judicial district contained the names of nearly all the leading lawyers in the district, including all the supreme court judges and a great many others, who would certainly not have signed it had they not believed him competent to develop into a good judge. This petition was Mr. Coxe's real credentials; and assuming the appointment to be made solely on the ground of this petition, it is abundantly justified. It may be added that Mr. Coxe was the only candidate for the appointment east of Rochester, and that his selection was urged by practically the entire bar between Syracuse and Albany.

A note from Chairman Pomeroy, of the Columbia county republican committee, informs us that Mr. Dobbins nominee for representative has declined, because of official disability, and that Mr. Geo. W. McBride has been named by the committee in his stead, and has accepted. Mr. McBride was the first and unanimous choice of the convention which nominated Mr. Dobbins and then declined, because of illness from which he has recovered. His election is assured.

WHY "REFORM" IS A FAILURE.

Very little has been heard in congress of late about civil service reform. Whether this is because it was found that to put in practice the theories debated at the opening would interfere with plans for obtaining offices for favorites, and a recollection, or because the prospect was so poor as to seem a hopeless task, persons may differ. The suggestion that senators and representatives would do a great deal towards advancing the cause by reforming their own practices was probably found to be far too practical for present use. At any rate, they have not abated their efforts to obtain the offices after the old fashion. The president has been kept busy listening to petitions and delegations clamoring for a division of the spoils, just as though no one ever dreamed of reforming the practice. The mass meetings at the White House and departments have continued as usual, and apparently reformers have found it inconvenient to put their theories in practice. On the contrary, in some instances where the president attempted to do so by declining to remove capable incumbents to reward "workers," he has suffered the penalty of complaints and, in some instances, of organized opposition. A consistent and steadfast course on the part of the president might have had a better result. Wherever senators and representatives have had their way and paid off faithful adherents they have been satisfied, notwithstanding a multitude of others have been displeased. Whenever they have not had their way the appointing power has not infrequently been abused without mercy.

This is the fashion of the reformers in general. "Is he capable, is he faithful?" is nearly an obsolete question. In some instances the appointing power itself has undertaken to distribute rewards, possibly for no better reasons than senators and representatives come armed with, and then there has been a spasm of reform. Consideration should be given to the fact that the president has not a senate politically friendly. He might drive ahead and put in and put out by the score, but what would the senate do? It has at no time been hard to see that here was a difficulty which might be indefinitely aggravated. It would be the easiest thing in the world to have it so. Experience as to this is not wanting. Many things which the president and all his party might wish to accomplish could easily be rendered impossible. Some wisdom seemed to be needed. Somebody had to decide about it. It was but natural the appointing power should have some views which might not always be unreasonable or perfectly selfish. To resist just enough to avoid an interminable muddle, and to go ahead fast enough not to produce the opposite state of things, would seem to have been a task not perfectly easy. Arthur has had and still has troubles—some of them his own creations. Each president is a living argument in favor of a single term, be it four or more years. No man once an occupant of the white house by election or through the lottery of accident should be re-eligible. No one questions that the presidential bee has buzzed in Arthur's bonnet ever since he took the oath. Many things in his course are referable to this single fact. A veteran observer was heard to express the belief recently that the term of every person in the public service, high and low, ought to be fixed, all with certain exceptions to be ineligible for re-election. It is indisputable that senators and representatives make it their first business to prepare for re-election, the reformers included. Not one of them all does not seek to use the offices to this end. It is for this that the president is besieged and the departments are overrun. As a general fact according as the president seconds their wishes he is right; as he does not he is wrong. One of the reformers, a correspondent writes, whose voice has echoed in the capitol, visited one of the departments to get a "wheel horse" in his district pensioned with an office. "It will give me great pleasure to appoint your man," remarked the secretary. The reformer was delighted. "I believe the men who do the work should be rewarded," continued the obliging secretary, handing the reformer the blue book. "Please select the place you wish for your man," he continued, "and when you have furnished the department good and sufficient reasons over your own name why the incumbent should be removed, your 'wheel horse' shall have it." The reformer began to see. He did not know how he could do that. "Nor I either," added the secretary. "Look here," he continued, "you come here asking me to appoint your man! To do it I must turn some one out. I am too good a reformer myself for that." Thereupon the visit ended.

The president complains of this sort of pressure. The departments do also. For these and similar reasons the cause of civil service has made no headway. The reformers will not reform themselves. The stream is foul because its source is.

Four-fifths of the raw cotton of the world is produced in the United States, but we manufacture not more than half as much as Great Britain. We could save hundreds of millions of dollars by manufacturing our own raw cotton. But Mr. Edward Atkinson contents himself for the present with an exhibition to our planters of a method of saving tens of millions. He says that improvements in ginning could easily be made whereby $30,000,000 could be saved on the cotton crop annually. The poor gins now in use waste much cotton and damage more. Mr. Atkinson's paper, read before the New England Cotton Manufacturers' Association, says that waste and bad workmanship probably cost the planters $60,000,000 on a year's cotton crop. He has doubtless saved the country millions of dollars by his investigation of southern industries, and the $30,000,000 which will be saved if his advice to planters is heeded will probably be but a part of what the country many gain through his recommendations concerning the south.

SPRAGUE, W. T.

Something about its Rapid Growth and Prospects for the Future.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE OREGONIAN.]

SPRAGUE, W. T., May 9.

Less than two years ago the first building was erected in Sprague, and hardly six months since the town numbered less than a dozen structures. The establishment of the general offices and machine shops of the N. P. R. R. at this place gave it an impulse and inspired confidence in the minds of the people, so that settlers came flocking in, until the population now numbers not less than 600, and the growth of the place is retarded only by the limited supply of lumber.

Sprague is named after the genial superintendent of the railway company, and bids fair to become as popular as that gentleman himself. It is on the line of the N. P. R. R., 120 miles from Ainsworth and two miles from the head of Lake Colville. Cheney is twenty-five miles beyond, and Spokane Falls forty-one. It has a stream of living water flowing through it, and lies in a sort of valley surrounded by foot-hills. The timber belt begins just beyond the town and can be seen in the distance. Land in the immediate vicinity is for the most part inferior, though several hay and dairy farms are within easy reach. Towards the west, however, in the direction of the big bend of the Columbia, there is much valuable farming land, and the country is rapidly settling up. Immigrants pass through Sprague daily, twenty loaded wagons passing in a day. Camp Spokane, fifty miles away, and Colville, 100, receive their supplies via Sprague, while Colfax, fifty miles away, and the great Palouse country lie in the other direction.

All the various branches of business are well represented. Of general merchandise stores, there are eight; of drug stores, one; of hardware, one; one bakery, two restaurants, four hotels, all crowded at that to their utmost capacity; one barber shop, one bank, and various other branches. There are also two physicians and one lawyer.

With daily mails, salubrious climate and good prospects, there is no reason why Sprague should not be a place second in importance to any in this section of country. The chief want at present is a church and a schoolhouse. Already steps have been taken towards the erection of the former. The Rev. Dr. Nevins spent Sunday here, and preached twice to attentive congregations, numbering some forty persons. Services were held in the drug store, seats being improvised with rough boards placed upon boxes. It is proposed to erect a church at once, or as soon as the money can be raised. The Rt. Rev. Bishop Paddock is expected to preach here two weeks hence. Steps will also be taken soon towards the erection of a schoolhouse. B.

HILL & BARR.

The Daily Oregonian.

THURSDAY MORNING MAY 11, 1882.

CITY.

Tussle with an Insane Man.—Justice McGuire and Constable Hill, of East Portland, had a short rough and tumble fight with an insane man yesterday afternoon. It had been reported to Mr. McGuire that a crazy man was roaming about the woods near Sullivan's gulch, and had been sleeping on the ground without covering for the past week. When they found their man he seemed perfectly rational, and while Mr. Hill engaged him in conversation McGuire got behind him and attempted to throw a rope over his arms, but failed and then the trouble began. Although small in stature the man seemed a perfect giant in strength, and it was only with their utmost efforts that they finally threw him to the ground and bound his hands. He was taken to the county jail, where he gave his name as Olef Nelson and said he was from the Cascades. His hobby seemed to be stoves, as he delivered quite an oration on that subject, and expressed his deepest contempt for anyone who would charge two prices for that domestic article. He will be examined before Judge Birch to-day.

Arrived.—The British steamer Glenelg, steamed to Flanders' dock at the foot of D street yesterday, and discharged her cargo of 650 Chinamen. She had no freight. The Chinamen seem to be a hearty, lusty set of fellows, not yellow, but with skins of ruddy bronze and are above average size. The steamer was originally a full rigged ship of from 894 tons; but is now barkentine rigged and carries a great amount of canvas. On the day before the vessel reached the bar, the Chinese had only 24 hours' provisions and had laid plans for murdering the officers and crew and taking their provisions. The boatswain heard of the proposed attack and communicated the information to the officers, who made preparations with the fire hose and arms to resist a charge. Fortunately, the next day, a tug came to them, and the Chinese did not attempt to put their plans into execution. The broken crank shaft will be repaired here and the vessel will sail for Hongkong via Yokohama.

Attempted Suicide.—Yesterday evening about 7 o'clock a Chinaman named Ah Louie attempted to commit suicide by jumping from a scow lying at the foot of Main street. He walked to the dock and laying his knife and a pair of old shoes on the scow jumped into the water with a yell. The engineer and fireman of the tow-boat Rustler, lying near at hand, heard the splash and pulled the heathen out with a boat hook. He could not speak a word of English, and when a bottle of whisky was given him to drink he poured the contents over his vest instead of under it. He was taken to the police station by a policeman, where he was given some dry clothes. Shortly after two other Chinamen came for him, who said he was insane, and that they had him locked in a room, but he escaped by breaking the lock on the door. However the half-drowned celestial refused to go with the other Chinamen, preferring the warm quarters of the city jail to his former place of confinement.

Double Drowning.—Walter Adair and Alonzo Strange, each about 19 years of age, while crossing the mouth of the Calapooia river at Albany, Tuesday evening, on a scow loaded with sand, are supposed to have been drowned, as the scow was found about 7 o'clock that evening, bottom side up, just below the dam near Foster's mill. They were last seen about 4 o'clock crossing with the scow to the island for sand for Cherry's iron foundry. Friends have been dragging the river expecting to recover their lifeless bodies. Adair is a nephew of Mrs. S. E. Ripperton, of this city, who upon receipt of the news left for Albany.

The Lawrence Affair.—The case of the state against J. A. Lawrence, charged with bigamy, was called in Justice Petrain's court yesterday, and on motion of the district attorney, was continued until 2 o'clock this afternoon. Further prosecution of the case must take place in Clatsop county, as the crime was committed there and no court in Multnomah county will have jurisdiction. The inference that he was arrested upon the suggestion of the members of Mrs. Lawrence's household is incorrect. The step was taken alone by Messrs. Woodward & Woodward, their legal advisers.

Arrested for Robbery.—Henry Meyers, proprietor of the beer hall on the northwest corner of Second and Washington streets, Molly Hughes, alias Meyers, who keeps a bawdy house above the saloon, and Hattie Evans, an inmate of the house, were arrested yesterday charged with robbing Geo. Kelly of $60 early yesterday morning. They all furnished bail and were released. Kelly told a plausible story of how he had been induced to go from the saloon up stairs, and being plied with drink and robbed. The case will be called in the police court to-day.

Summer Excursions.—Commencing about June 1st, the O. R. & N. Co. will make a special feature of excursion parties on the various railway and steamboat lines. Completion of the road from the Cascades to The Dalles will give them two of their largest and finest steamers for the lower river, and they will thus be enabled to give accommodations to pleasure seekers which under the old regime was impossible. The reduced rate schedule for tourists will be issued late this month.

For the East.—Mr. H. W. Fairweather, superintendent of the Northern Pacific railroad, Pend d'Oreille division, leaves by the Columbia to-night en route to the east, where he will spend five or six weeks. Mr. Fairweather has seen twelve years steady service as the head of various departments with transportation companies, filled the positions with marked ability, and merits the vacation. Mr. Otis Sprague will act as superintendent during Mr. Fairweather's absence.

Threatening to Kill.—Mrs. Ida Young, who resides on Third street between Madison and Jefferson, yesterday evening made a complaint against her husband, George Young, a painter, at police headquarters, charging him with threatening to kill her. He was arrested shortly after and in want of bail was confined in the city jail. They have not been living together for some time past, and it is but a short time since she stayed at the police station all night to keep away from her husband.

Asphyxiated.—A. L. Smith, a laborer on the O. R. & N. Co.'s grade in East Portland, was nearly suffocated in a well yesterday morning about 11 o'clock. He had gone down to put off a blast, but was overcome by the gas and fell to the bottom in an insensible condition. By the aid of the foreman and several laborers he was drawn from his dangerous position and taken to the Home hotel, where with medical assistance he soon recovered consciousness. He was not materially injured.

Young Men's Republican Club.—Necessary steps are being taken to organize a young men's republican club in this city. A paper has been circulated and a meeting will be held in the office of D. P. Paxton, corner of Front and Stark streets, this evening to effect a permanent organization. All young men interested in the success of the republican party are cordially invited to be present.

Case Dismissed.—James A. Francis was tried in Justice Davis' court yesterday for assaulting a Chinaman named Wing Lee, near Smith Bros.' mill the other day. The charge against him could not be maintained for lack of witnesses to prove Francis the same person who struck the Chinaman, as there were several parties in the melee. The case was dismissed.

Whisky Smuggler Disposed Of.—W. J. Stevens, who was arrested in Alaska and brought to this city charged with smuggling whisky, was tried in the U. S. circuit court yesterday. His counsel entered a demurrer to the second count of information, argued the case and submitted it. A verdict will probably be given to-morrow.

Accident.—A few days ago the "man hole" in the boiler of the Northern Pacific transfer boat D. S. Billings blew out while the boat was making the crossing at Ainsworth. She drifted down for three miles, but was fortunately not hit by a steam or upward bound and towed to a mooring. No one was injured by the escaping steam.

Drowned.—A little son of Capt. O. Olsen, of Freeport, was drowned in the Cowlitz, Tuesday, while walking along the bank of the river with his father, from the store to his residence. The body was recovered the day following. Capt. Olsen had just returned from Portland a short time before the sad accident.

Base Ball.—The Star base ball club will in all probability go to Oregon City next Sunday to play a match game with the Vancouver club, who will go there with the excursion party. It is not definitely decided as yet, but the boys want practice and say they would just as leave get beaten the first game as not.

New Barges.—The O. R. & N. Co. are building at Texas ferry three barges each 150 feet long, 30 feet wide and 5 feet depth of hold, with a carrying capacity of 400 tons. They will be used at first for transporting stone from Granite point for the bridge at Ainsworth, and then in the wheat traffic in Snake river.

Saloon Row.—Theodore Johnson yesterday swore out a warrant for the arrest of Hugh Fitzgerald, proprietor of an up-town saloon, charging him with assault and battery. Fitzgerald was arraigned in Justice Davis' court and entered a plea of not guilty. He will be tried Saturday, the 13th inst.

For the Cowlitz.—The steamers Joseph Kellogg and Toledo, make daily trips (except Sunday) to the Cowlitz river and are kept quite busy. There is quite a community on the Cowlitz who send the products of their farms to Portland and ship occasionally come up and see our metropolis.

Fastest Time.—The State of California, which left Portland at 9 o'clock Monday morning, arrived in San Francisco at 7 A. M. yesterday, 46 hours from dock to dock. This gives the State the fastest record down between port and port and from bar to bar.

In Service.—The sidewheel tug, Rustler, made a trial Sunday, and yesterday started out in the service of the owners, Hall, Taylor & Co. Her machinery was formerly in the tug Ben Holladay, which has been dismantled.

Not Decided.—A telegram from Congressman M. C. George was read at the board of trade meeting yesterday afternoon, announcing that the war department had not yet decided upon the removal of the army officers from this city to Vancouver.

Suit on a Note.—Suit was yesterday begun in the state circuit court by W. K. Smith against A. H. Nennert. The plaintiff claims that Nennert owes him $450, for which he holds a note, and brings the suit to recover the same.

The Oregon's Cargo.—The Oregon, which sailed from San Francisco yesterday, brings 55 cabin passengers, 41 in the steerage and 1501 tons freight, of which 117 tons are for Astoria.

The Oneatta Sold.—The river steamer Oneatta has been sold to a company at Humboldt bay, Cal., and will steam there in a few days, under command of Capt. A. D. Wass, of Astoria.

Claim Located.—Benj. E. Hancock and A. J. Wiley, filed notice with the county clerk yesterday, of the location of a quartz claim at Rooster Rock.

BOARD OF TRADE.

A Memorial Urging the Passage of the Nicaragua Canal Bill Endorsed.

A special meeting of the board of trade was held yesterday afternoon, President Mackay in the chair. He stated that the object of the meeting was to consider the following:

Joint Memorial.

Los Angeles, Cal., Chamber of Commerce, and the Board of Trade of San Francisco.

To the Honorable Senate of the United States and the House of Representatives in Congress assembled: Your memorialists, representing the principal commercial interests of our Pacific coast, respectfully but urgently call your attention to the necessity of the passage of the bill now before congress incorporating the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua. The people of the Pacific coast states of our country are comparatively familiar with the questions involved in a successful intercourse transit. Thousands of them have the question at heart, being a vital one to our material interests, and it has received our close attention, with the result that we are convinced that the successful solution is only to be found in the Nicaragua route, a conviction which we leave no doubt has impressed itself upon your committee before whom the facts have been presented. The measure should have no enemies, for it injures no interests within our borders; it is of great commercial and political importance to our whole country, and of vital consequence to our Pacific coast states and territories. The Nicaragua canal is practical and comparatively economical work, involving no experimental features, which undoubtedly it promises success. For many years the Pacific coast commonwealths must remain a producing rather than manufacturing region, and this work has become necessary to our progress and prosperity. We appeal to your patriotic sympathy, confident that our government will appreciate our position, and by the passage of the bill incorporating the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua inaugurate a work which will honor and benefit our whole country by securing its political and commercial preponderance on the west coast of the American continent, and on the Pacific coast to the shores of the Orient.

After some discussion the memorial was unanimously endorsed.

THE ORCHESTRAL CONCERT.

The directors of the Orchestral Union take pleasure in thus publicly thanking Prof. Varges and the ladies having the matter in charge for the postponement until Saturday of the "German" at Turn hall, invitations to which had been issued for Friday, May 12, the evening of the orchestral concert. This will enable a large number to embrace the much desired opportunity of attending both entertainments. The number of seats reserved for the concert has been larger than expected, and now that the only known obstacle has been removed there cannot fail to be an overflowing house. Constant rehearsals, untiring energy, and an increased ensemble have raised the standard of our Orchestral Union much above the ordinary run of such societies, and the public will appreciate this when the work shall have been heard. It has been our privilege to attend several of the last rehearsals, and the concert will demonstrate beyond a doubt a most decided and astonishing improvement over the initial effort of the society. Our public should not fail to attend en masse, as the programme, while partly classical, has the additional recommendation of being popular. The directors have determined to throw open the gallery at the usual prices, viz., fifty cents, thus enabling many who could not otherwise afford it to attend what must be an enjoyable entertainment to all. Miss Anderson, a deservedly popular vocalist, has been engaged and will lend an additional attraction to the programme. Seats may be secured at D. W. Prentice & Co.'s.

BRIEF MENTION.

The Columbia sails for San Francisco to-night.

The "Glenelg" spells backward and forward the same.

The ladies of the Christian church will give a social next Tuesday evening.

Mr. J. B. Handley, formerly of Portland, now of Colton, W. T., is in the city.

Mr. Marion Ellis and family will leave by the Columbia for southern California, where they will live in future. Their change of residence is made on account of climatic advantages to Mrs. Ellis.

Rev. Geo. F. Plummer was called to San Francisco by the sudden illness of his son Leighton and left by the last steamer. Mrs. Plummer's proposed trip to her old home in Delaware has in consequence been deferred.

The Rev. Mr. Thompson, of Olympia, is expected over to-day. He will conduct the usual Thursday evening meeting in the Calvary Presbyterian church, corner Eleventh and Main streets, preaching a sermon upon that occasion.

PROCLAMATION.

To the people of the State of Oregon: Whereas I, S. Friedman, of the county of Multnomah, city of Portland, have opened a very choice lot of goods and have offered them to the public at prices that no one can compete with me, and yet some of the people, I am ashamed to say, cannot read, or they would have come and availed themselves of the opportunity of purchasing some of the articles I offer so low, and by their not attending to it and the improving of the street and fixing the street railway, also the building of Ladd's brick opposite my store, on corner of Salmon and First, has kept the travel away from my place of business so that I have more goods on hand than I ought to have by this time and less money, and it is the last named article I have the most use for. I therefore demand of each and every one of you that has coin to come to my place of business and convince yourselves, from the low prices of my goods, that I mean business. My stock comprises a general variety, and whoever wants goods will not go away on account of prices, and should you fail to respond to this call you will pay a penalty of 25 per cent. by purchasing elsewhere than of me. Respectfully yours,

S. FRIEDMAN,
Cor. First and Salmon streets, Portland, Ogn.

YAQUINA BAY NOTES.

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.]

Newport, May 8.

Delightful weather and sea bathing has already commenced.

Newport has many speculators here now awaiting further developments, anxious to make investments.

The steamer Kate and Anna arrived here about the same time, discharged her freight and cleared for Portland.

Colt VanCleve will return this week and issue the Yaquina Post in the interest of the bay and the people generally.

Mr. Wm. Hogue is expected soon to locate the grade of Yaquina City, after which parties desiring can secure lots at reasonable figures.

The schooner Sea Foam, Capt. J. J. Wynant, is looked for daily from San Francisco. Her cargo consists principally of railroad freight.

The shipping interests of Yaquina bay are beginning to attract considerable attention, and we look forward to the time, in the near future, when we will have ships daily.

The steamer Yaquina, Capt. Jos. Bailey, came here last week, discharging her freight and went out the same day en route for Coos Bay, where she will take in coal for cargo.

The object of greatest interest here is the new bulletin board at The Capsain's drugstore, upon which is posted the latest railroad and political news of the day by the Telephone Co.

The tug Sol Thomas, Jr., Capt. Holt, came to this place from Coos Bay, having on board Capt. J. Holt of the steamer Arcata, of Coos Bay. He came here for the purpose of seeing and sounding the bay and bar. The bar was breaking when she came in, but on the turn of the tide, it became less rough and they sounded and the shallowest water found was 17½ feet and only one cast. Capt. Holt has some intention of putting his steamer upon the route between here and San Francisco. She is 186 feet long, built in proportion, and of good carrying capacity, and he is more than pleased with the bar and bay. We wish the captain success in the enterprise.

LIFE INSURANCE.

Why so large a business in life insurance is being done. The tendency of the rates of interest is downward. Rates of a few years past cannot be secured now, while the trouble of investing danger from loss, &c., remains the same. The endowment policies of the best companies give a good compound interest. When you take into consideration the taxes, repairs, fire insurance, bad debts, attorneys' fees, &c., on ordinary investments, the endowment policy investment is a good one and especially the deposit endowment of the Pacific Mutual, as in this you have a life insurance in addition. This plan, peculiar to this company, commends itself as a most excellent investment, and gives a rate of interest sufficiently high for any safe and cautious man to ask. To show the wonderful increase of business in life insurance we would state that at the Portland agency of the Pacific Mutual their manager has received applications for considerably over one-half million dollars of insurance since the first day of January, 1882.

JONATHAN MILLS GRADUAL REDUCTION PROCESS.

$2,000 CHALLENGE.

OVER 500 MACHINES IN USE.

The Degerminator Splits the Wheat and removes the germ and seam impurities perfectly. These Reduction Machines granulate the wheat, without cutting or abrading the bran. Guaranteed to make rounder and larger middlings and a greater per centage; also STRONGER and WHITER FLOUR than any other system in use.

A LIBERAL OFFER TO MILLERS. Knowing the superiority of the Jonathan Mills Degerminator and Reduction Machines for reducing wheat, we submit the following liberal proposition:

We will set aside the Corrugated Rolls and put our machines in their place at our expense, and without making any other changes, we will guarantee Better Results than are now obtained, that is, from the same quantity and quality of wheat now used per barrel, we will guarantee a larger per centage of Patent Flour of equal quality to that now made; a less per centage of low grade flour, and a Bakers' Flour superior in color and quality to, and worth more money than, the Bakers' Flour now made in the same mills. If we fail to accomplish Better Results as above, we will take out our machines and replace the Rolls, all at our own expense, and, in addition, will forfeit to the miller a cash bonus of $2000 to $10,000, according to the capacity of the mill.

In practical operation at City of Salem Co's Capitol Mills, Salem, Or.

Who Manufacture Four Grades of Flour from our Machines.

A TEST CROWNED BY VICTORY OVER THE ROLLER SYSTEM.

In January, 1880, Mellow & Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, bought the Jonathan Mills Reduction Machines and fitted up their "National Mills" therewith, continuing to use these machines for a year and a half. In August last, 1881, they were asked to set out the Reduction Machines and put in the Corrugated Roller Mills, subject to acceptance after trial, and had their mills re-arranged, at considerable expense, by practical men, skilled in the art of roller milling, aided and backed by all the talent and experience of the manufacturers of Roller Mills. After five months' trial McDow & Co. have thrown out the Corrugated Rolls and put the Jonathan Mills Reduction Machines back into their mill, where they are now in use, because the work of the Jonathan Mills Reduction Machines so far excelled that done by the Rolls.

ON TRIAL WITHOUT EXPENSE to the Miller. In any mill where Corrugated Rolls are used for reducing wheat, we will put in our machines in place of the Rolls, furnish all shaftings, pulleys, etc., at our own expense, and let the miller run them on trial for 60 days. If the miller chooses to keep them we will charge him the regular price and the actual cost of making the change. If he prefers to keep the Rolls we will take out the machines and replace the Rolls as before, thus insuring the miller a satisfactory result at his own mill, and without any expense. GOOD BYE, PROUD WORLD!

BY RALPH WALDO EMERSON—WRITTEN IN 1822.

Good bye, proud world! I'm going home;
Thou art not my friend; I am not thine.
Too long through weary crowds I roam—
A river ark on the ocean brine;
Too long I am tossed like the driven foam,
But now, proud world, I'm going home.

Good bye to Flattery's fawning face,
To Grandeur with his wise grimace,
To upstart Wealth's averted eye,
To supple office, low and high,
To crowded halls, to court and street,
To frozen hearts and hasting feet;
To those who go and those who come,
Good bye, proud world, I'm going home.

I go to seek my own hearthstone,
Bosomed in yon green hills alone;
A secret lodge in a pleasant land,
Whose groves the frolic fairies planned,
Where arches green the livelong day
Echo the blackbird's roundelay,
And evil men have never trod
A spot that is sacred to thought and God.

Oh, when I am safe in my sylvan home,
I mock at the pride of Greece and Rome,
And when I am stretched beneath the pines,
Where the evening star so holy shines,
I laugh at the lore and pride of man,
At the sophist schools, and the learned clan;
For what are they all in their high conceit,
When man in the bush with God may meet?

THE SECRET CLOSET.

A Detective's Story.

"For murder, though it have no tongue, will speak with most miraculous organ, surely."

In the year 18—, John Smith (I use fictitious names) was indicted for the willful murder of Henry Thompson. The case was one of a most extraordinary nature, and the interest excited by it was almost unparalleled. The accused was a gentleman of considerable property, residing upon his own estate. A person supposed to be an entire stranger to him, had late in a summer's day requested and obtained shelter and hospitality for the night. He had, it was supposed, after taking some light refreshment, retired to bed in perfect health, requesting to be awakened at an early hour on the following morning. When the servant appointed to call him entered the room for that purpose he was found in his room perfectly dead, and from the appearance of the body it was quite obvious that he had been so for many hours. There was not the slightest mark of violence upon his person, and the countenance retained the same expression it had done during life.

Days and weeks passed on, and little further was discovered. In the meantime rumor had not been idle. Suspicions were vague indeed, and undefined, and were at first whispered and afterwards boldly expressed. The precise object of these suspicions was not clearly indicated; some implicated one person and some another, but they all pointed to Smith, the master of the house, as concerned in the death of the stranger, and, in fine, the magistrates were induced to commit Mr. Smith to jail to await his trial for the willful murder of Henry Thompson. As it was deemed essential to the attainment of justice to keep secret the examination of the witnesses before the magistrates, all the information of which the public were in possession before the trial took place was that which I have narrated. Such was the state of things upon the morning of the trial.

The counsel for the prosecution opened the case to the jury in a manner that indicated very little expectation of a conviction. He began by imploring them to divest their minds of all that they had heard before they came into the box; he entreated them to attend to the evidence, and judge from that alone.

It would be proved beyond the possibility of a doubt that the deceased died by poison—poison of a most subtle nature, most active in its operation and possessing the wonderful and dreadful quality of leaving no external mark by which its presence could be detected. The ingredients of which it was composed were of so sedative a nature that instead of the body on which it had been used exhibiting any contortions or marks of suffering, it left upon the features nothing but the calm and placid appearance of repose.

The prisoner's family consisted only of himself, a housekeeper and one man servant. The man servant slept in an outhouse adjoining the stable, and did so on the night of Thompson's death. The prisoner slept at one end of the house and the housekeeper at the other, and the deceased had been put into a room adjoining the housekeeper's.

It would be proved by a person who happened to be passing by the house in question, about three hours after midnight, that he had been induced to remain and watch from having his attention excited by the circumstance, then very unusual, of a light moving about the house at that late hour. The person would state most positively that he could distinctly see a figure, holding a light, go from room to room; that two persons then came out of the housekeeper's room and the light disappeared a minute. Whether the two persons went into Thompson's room he could not see, as the window of that room looked another way; but in about a minute they returned, passing quietly along the house to Smith's room again, and in about five minutes the light was extinguished and he saw it no more.

Such was the evidence upon which the magistrate had committed Smith; and singular enough, since his committal the housekeeper had disappeared, nor could any trace of her be discovered.

Within the last week the witness who saw the light had been more particularly examined, and in order to refresh his memory had been placed at dark in the very spot where he had stood that night, and another person was placed with him. The whole scene, as he had described it, was acted over again, but it was utterly impossible from the cause above mentioned, to assert, when the light disappeared, whether the parties had gone into Thompson's room. As it, however, to throw still deeper mystery over this extraordinary transaction, the witness persisted in adding a new feature to his former statement, that after the persons returned with the light into Smith's room, and before it was extinguished, he had twice perceived some dark object to intervene between the light and the window, almost as large as the surface of the window itself, and which he described by saying it appeared as if a door had been placed before the light.

Now in this room there was nothing which could account for this appearance; his bed was in a different part, and there was neither cupboard nor press in the room, which, but for the bed, was entirely empty; the room in which he dressed being at a distance beyond.

He would state only one fact more, said the learned counsel, and, having done his duty, it would be for the jury to perform theirs.

Within a few days there had been found in the prisoner's house the stopper of a small bottle of a very singular appearance. It was apparently of foreign manufacture, and was described by the medical men as being used by chemists to preserve liquids which are most likely to lose their virtues by exposure to the air. To whom it belonged, or to what use it had been applied, there was no evidence to show.

Such was the address of the counsel for the prosecution, and during its delivery I had earnestly watched the countenance of the prisoner, who had listened, too, with deep attention. Twice only did I perceive that it produced in him the slightest emotion. When the disappearance of the housekeeper was mentioned, a smile as of scorn passed over his lips, and the notice of the discovery of the stopper obviously excited an interest, and, I thought, an apprehension, but it quickly subsided. I need not detail the evidence that was given for the prosecution; it amounted in substance to that which the counsel stated, nor was it varied in any particular. The stopper was produced and proved to be found in the house, but no attempt was made to trace it to the prisoner's possession or even knowledge.

When the case was closed the learned judge, addressing the counsel for the prosecution, said he thought there was hardly sufficient evidence to call upon the prisoner for his defense, and if the jury were of the same opinion they would at once stop the case. On this observation from the judge the jury turned round for a moment, and then intimated their acquiescence in his honor's views of the evidence. The counsel folded up their briefs, and a verdict of acquittal was about to be taken, when the prisoner addressed the court. He urged the court to permit him to state his case to the jury and to call his housekeeper with so much earnestness, and was seconded so ably by his counsel, that the judge, though very much against his inclination and contrary to his usual habit, gave way and yielded to the request.

The prisoner then addressed the jury and entreated their patience for a short time. He repeated to them that he never could be acquitted to rely because the evidence was not conclusive, and pledged himself in a very short time, by the few observations he should make, to obtain their verdict upon much higher grounds—upon the impossibility of his being guilty of the awful crime.

Of the stopper which had been found he disowned all knowledge; declared most solemnly that he had never seen it before it was produced in court; and he asked could the fact of its being found in his house only a few days ago, when hundreds of people had been there, produce upon an impartial mind even a moment's prejudice against him? One fact, and only one, has been proved to which it was possible for him to give an answer—the fact of his having gone to the bedroom of his housekeeper on the night in question.

He had been subject for many years of his life to sudden fits of illness; he felt them coming on that occasion, and had gone to her to procure assistance in lighting a fire. She had returned with him to his room for that purpose, he having waited for a minute in the passage while she put on her clothes, which would account for the momentary disappearance of the light; and after she had remained in his room for a few minutes, finding himself better, he had dismissed her, and retired again to bed, from which he had risen when informed of the death of his guest. It had been said that, after his committal to prison, his housekeeper had disappeared. He avowed that, finding his enemies determined, if possible, to accomplish his ruin, he had thought it probable that they might tamper with his servant; he had therefore kept her out of the way; but for what purpose? Not to prevent her testimony being given, for she was now under the care of his solicitor, and would instantly appear for the purpose of confirming, as far as she was concerned, the statement which he had just made.

Such was the prisoner's address, which produced a powerful effect. It was delivered in a firm and impressive manner, and its simplicity and artlessness gave it an appearance of truth. The housekeeper was then put in the box and examined by the counsel of the prisoner. According to the custom at that time, almost universal, of excluding witnesses from the court until their testimony was required, she had been kept at a house near at hand, and had not heard a single word of the trial. There was nothing remarkable in her manner or appearance; she might be about thirty-five or a little more, with regular though not agreeable features, and an air perfectly free from embarrassment.

She repeated almost in the prisoner's own words, the story of his having called her up, and she having accompanied him to his room, adding that after leaving him she had retired to her own room and had been awakened by a man-servant in the morning with an account of the unfortunate traveler's death.

She had now to undergo a cross-examination; and I may as well state here what, though not known to me till afterwards, will assist the reader to understand the following scene: The counsel for the prosecution had, in his own mind, attached considerable importance to the circumstances mentioned by the witness who saw the light, that while the prisoner and housekeeper were in the room of the former, something like a door had intervened between the window and the candle, which was totally irreconcilable with the appearance of the room when examined, and he had half persuaded himself that there must be a secret closet which had escaped the officers of justice, the opening of which would account for the appearance alluded to, and the existence of which might discover the property which had so mysteriously vanished.

His object, therefore, was to obtain from the housekeeper (the only person except the prisoner who could give any clew to this) such information as he could get, without alarming her by any direct inquiry on the subject, which as she should not know how much or how little the inquiry had brought to light, and by himself treating the matter as immaterial, he might lead her to consider it in the same light and by this means draw forth all she knew. After some unimportant questions he asked her in a tone and manner calculated rather to awaken confidence than to excite distrust—

"During the time you were in Mr. Smith's room you stated that the candle stood on the table in the center of the room?"

"Yes."

"Was the closet or cupboard, or whatever you call it, opened once or twice while it stood there?"

A pause; no answer.

"I will call it to your recollection. After Mr. Smith had taken the medicine out of the closet, did he shut the door, or did it remain open?"

"He shut it."

"Then it was opened again for the purpose of replacing the bottle, was it?"

"It was."

"Do you recollect how long it was open the last time?"

"Not above a minute."

"The door when open would be exactly between the light and the window, would it not?"

"It would."

"I forgot whether you said the closet was on the right or left hand side of the window?"

"The left."

"Would the door of the closet make any noise in opening it?"

"None."

"Can you speak positively to the fact? Have you ever opened it yourself, or seen Smith open it?"

"I never opened it myself."

"Did you ever keep the keys?"

"Never."

"Who did?"

"Mr. Smith, always."

At this moment the witness chanced to turn her eyes toward the spot where the prisoner stood, and the effect was also electrical. A cold damp sweat stood upon his brow; his face lost all its color. She no sooner saw him than she shrieked and fainted. The consequences of her answers flashed across her mind.

She had been so thoroughly deceived by the manner of the advocate, and by the little importance he seemed to attach to her statements, that she had been led on by the question to another till she had told him all he wanted to know.

During the interval (occasioned by her illness) as to the proceedings the solicitor left the court. It was between four and five o'clock when the judge resumed his seat upon the bench, the prisoner his station at the bar, and the housekeeper hers in the witness-box. The court in the interval had remained crowded with spectators, scarce one of whom had left his place, lest during his absence it should be seized by some one else.

The cross-examining counsel then addressed the witness:

"I have very few more questions to ask you, but beware that you answer them truly, for your own life depends upon a thread. Do you know this stopper?"

"I do."

"To whom does it belong?"

"To Mr. Smith."

"When did you see it last?"

"On the night of Mr. Thompson's death."

At this moment the solicitor for the prosecution entered the court, bringing with him, upon a tray, a watch, two money-bags, a jewel-case, a pocket book and a bottle of the same manufacture of the stopper, and having no cork in it. The tray was placed upon the table in sight of the prisoner and witness, and from that moment not a doubt remained in the mind of any man of the guilt of the prisoner.

A few words will bring my tale to a close. The house where the murder had been committed was between nine and ten miles distant. The solicitor, as soon as the cross-examination had discovered the existence of the closet and its situation, had set off on horseback with two sheriff's officers, and after pulling down part of the wall of the house, detected the place of concealment.

The search was well rewarded; the whole of the property belonging to Mr. Thompson was found there, amounting in value to several thousand pounds; and, to leave no doubt, a bottle was discovered, which the medical man instantly pronounced to contain the identical poison which had caused the death of the unfortunate Thompson. The result is too obvious to need explanation.

The case presents, perhaps, the unparalleled instance of a man accused of murder showing such a defence as to induce the judge and jury to concur in a verdict of acquittal, but who persisted in calling a witness to make his innocence more emphatic, and was upon the testimony of that very witness convicted and executed.

TWENTY-ONE KNOTS AN HOUR.

Captain Lundborg's Scheme for Fast Steamers on the Atlantic—Twin Screws and Powerful Engines.

New York Herald.

The recent trip of the Alaska, which crossed the Atlantic in little more than one hundred and seventy-four hours—an average speed of about sixteen knots—is a great feat, showing, as it does, the improvement in ocean steamships that has been gradually going on during the past decade. But rapid as that passage was, the traveling public, which is all the time increasing in number, will not rest satisfied with it. Seven or eight days on the ocean may not appear a long time to some people, particularly if the weather is fine and permits the usual pastimes, but to others—and these are decidedly in the majority—a week at sea means a week of unpleasant existence if not downright misery, and the more it is possible to shorten that period the more plentiful will be the blessings invoked upon the head of him who shall be the author of such a boon. It is hardly needed to add that the great mercantile community and others interested in the growing intercourse between the two continents would rejoice quite as much, if not more than the traveler. It is assumed, however, upon good authority that the limit of high speed with the present model of ship's hull has been very nearly if not quite reached. The performances of the Alaska and the Arizona, both constructed by the same shipbuilding firm in Scotland, goes a good way toward proving the truth of this assumption. In laying down the lines of the Alaska some years after the building of the Arizona it may be supposed that the builders bent all their energies to make the new ship surpass the Arizona in speed. This result was attained, but the difference [illegible] by both these ships, [illegible] or only about one [illegible] part of a knot. The inference to be drawn from [illegible] is not favorable to further expectations of materially shortening the duration of ocean voyages with the vessels as now built. It may perhaps not be altogether impossible to add yet another knot to the speed, but when there is taken into consideration the enormous increase of propelling power required to [illegible] this [illegible] increase—bearing in mind that a passenger ship intended to give comfortable quarters to a great number of people with their baggage and some cargo, cannot have all the room and carrying capacity taken up by engines and boilers, it hardly seems probable.

The limit of speed being reached in one direction the plain course would seem to be to try another tack. Radical changes and improvements are continually going on in every line of human industry, except indeed in shipbuilding, for it is easy to see that virtually the same model of sea-going vessels is in use now as thirty years ago. If anything it may be said that builders have gone backward in the art of building fast ships, inasmuch as the fast clipper ships built by Donald McKay many years ago are yet unsurpassed by anything afloat. The only difference seems to be that steamships are now made very long and extremely narrow, until the lowest limit of strength to resist the buffeting of the sea appears to have been reached as well as that of speed. It would, however, be strange indeed if there was no room for any real improvement in this branch of human knowledge, as well as in others.

A NEW DEPARTURE.

A new departure would seem necessary, and an experiment in this direction appears to have been taken by Captain C. G. Lundborg, a Swedish naval constructor, who brings forward a novel form of ship. The design and model shown are for an Atlantic express steamer, with twin screws, capable, it is claimed, of steaming upward of twenty-one knots. The dimensions of the proposed vessel are: Length, 450 feet; greatest breadth, 66 feet; draught of water at load water line, 23 feet; displacement, 10,881 tons. The propelling power is to consist of four compound engines, two on each propeller shaft of 4500 indicated horse power each, being thus 9000 horse power on each propeller, or in all 18,000 indicated horse power. The ship will have accommodation for 600 first and 1000 second and third class passengers, and carry 550 tons of mail matter and express cargo besides 2700 tons of coal. The ship is designed to be built of steel, enormously strong, with double bottom and numerous watertight compartments, transverse and longitudinal dividing the hull into cells and making her as unsinkable as possible. The proportion of length to breadth, being less than seven to one, instead of ten or eleven to one as in most steamships of the present day, will, it is claimed, add to the strength of construction. As seen above water the vessel will not present any unusual appearance, but the immersed body of the hull is greatly different from anything yet attempted in the way of shipbuilding. The main body of the hull making up the greatest part of the displacement, is low down, with the greatest breadth of beam some fifteen or sixteen feet below the load water line, terminating astern in a horizontal sternpost, through which the propeller shafts extend. This form of construction admits of great carrying capacity and ample space for the most powerful engines, with admirable lines and the finest possible entrance and run, and gives at the same time a perfect support to the propeller shafts, which run all the way inside the hull of the ship, and are therefore not, as usual, resting on arms and brackets extending from the ship's side into the water. As it appears evident that the enormous power needed to drive large steamers at a very high speed through the water cannot be very well transmitted and used economically upon one single screw it will have to be divided and applied upon two propellers.

The City of Rome, the Servia and the Alaska require probably from 8000 to 10,000 indicated horse power to steam sixteen knots per hour, but Captain Lundborg says in order to add four knots more to that speed, making it twenty knots, would—inasmuch as the power increases about as the cube of the speed—take nearly or quite twice that power, or from 16,000 to 20,000 indicated horse power. This, if the ships could conveniently carry and use the engines needed for developing such power, would hardly be attempted upon one single propeller shaft.

OTHER NEW FEATURES.

Another distinctive feature of the invention is that the forward part of the vessel or the bow is most pointed and sharp in the load water line, thus reversing the usual order. In other words, the water lines, which generally are the least sharp in the water edge, becoming more pointed or sharper toward the keel, are here sharpest in the water edge and grow fuller toward the bottom. The effect of this, the inventor says, is to diminish the resistance, as the body of the water will, during the progress of the ship, be more easily split or ruptured in the surface, as proved by extensive experiments, and will also give greatly increased stability to the vessel, which will be more "stiff" in proportion as she is lightened, thus requiring no ballast or weight in her bottom in order to be moved about. The form of the hull below water will, it is alleged, tend to keep the ship steady and less liable to pitch and roll than vessels of the general type—a very important feature indeed to the legion who are liable to seasickness. The propellers are situated some distance aft of the rudders (there being two of the latter, both being worked together) and will therefore work to the best advantage in unbroken "solid" water.

It is Captain Lundborg's intention, in connection with Messrs. Charles E. Wright & Co., of this city, to form a regular line of American built passenger and mail steamers between New York and Liverpool that will surpass in speed and comfort anything yet afloat.
